

Sheboygan Straits

Created by Chad and Andy McEvoy

Situated on a breathtaking plot of land in Eastern Wisconsin overlooking Lake Michigan, the Straits course near the town of Sheboygan provides an extremely demanding test of golf. Despite possessing few trees, the Straits challenges golfers with its thick, fescue rough, massive bunkering, and several lakeside holes. Sheboygan Straits has hosted three recent major championships, quickly becoming one of the most recognizable courses in golf.

One of the interesting aspects of HMG is the concept that the course card visually representing the hole you're playing. In our design, we wanted to fully leverage this through the use of tables and colors, as you see in the example below. We hope this helps players further visualize the holes they are playing.

Note: This course creation contest provided a fun chance for a father and 13-year-old son to work together on this project. We hope you enjoy playing our course as much as we did creating it.

The green is large, but dozens of bunkers will capture shots short, right, or long of the green, while shots missed left can end up at the bottom of Lake Michigan.
