We’ve tried to make our selection of teams as balanced as possible across the various eras of baseball, with a modest emphasis on the 1950s through ‘80s.

As the event gets closer, we’ll provide ground rules for player usage, interleague play, era pitching guidelines and other information about how the tournament will be conducted. If you have questions, e-mail us at info@plaay.com.

This will be our seventh installment of the Time Machine Tournament, all have been tremendous fun. The 2017 tournament was played with the “All-Time Greatest Losers” card set, the others played with the “Famous Fall Classics” series cards. After last year’s convention, the idea was proposed to do a “500” tournament, played with teams that finished at or near .500. We’ve ported over that idea to our “not-con” tournament, which will be played as a cooperative rather than competitive event. Here’s how it’ll work...

The available pool of teams--one for each current big league franchise, and six bonus teams representing displaced franchises--is listed at left. PLAAY Gamer Travis Jansen has created cards for each of these teams using the HMB “How-To” guide. The cards will be available for free download about a week before the tournament. We’ll assign one of the teams to you, and on Saturday morning August 8, you’ll play a two-game series between the team we’ve assigned you and a team of your own choosing. If the series is split, you’ll play a third game. You’ll then post your scores on the Not-Con Facebook page, and we’ll add the results in to the cumulative standings.

The team from each league with the best winning percentage (with a minimum of number of games played, TBD) will advance to our Time Machine Tournament Title Game, which will be streamed live at the conclusion of the day.
